

As a long haul truck driver, I, feel that if you limit XM's broadcast of local traffic and weather information for a certain area or metropolitan area you would be doing a dis-service to the public. People need to know what is going on around them and to be able to plan there routes accordingly. Not find out that a way is blocked or limited to what can or can not go thru an area. XM is doing the same thing that the local AM/FM stations and the television stations are doing. They are simply doing so in a different frequency, and to a possibly greater audience. Due to the range that is possible for XM. It is nice to know what is ahead of you so that you can make preperations for something.
